New Projects

March 28, 2026

By Jennifer Westecott

I have been working diligently on a new and exciting novel. It is filled with passion, heartbreak, and thrills that will keep you on the edge of your seat. I have dedicated countless hours to this project and have even restarted it three times. The current version flows much better and has me captivated by the final outcome. I sit in my quiet office, looking out the window, enjoying the view, while my adoring little fans—my cats—often join me as well.

I look forward to sharing teasers of the new novel with all of you, along with a free downloadable ebook that will accompany it. I sit here listening to romantic classical music that keeps me motivated with every keystroke. The sounds that emanate from the music evoke strong emotions in me, which I channel into my work for all of my readers. As things progress with the new book and upcoming developments for Heartbreak Falls, I will keep everyone updated. The latest news from Heartbreak Falls is that we are starting to work on a Book Trailer that I will feature here, on YouTube, and across all of my other social media platforms. I will also launch additional campaign banners to promote the books. I have a fantastic team supporting me, including my publishers, as well as my amazing family and friends. The support I receive from everyone is, without a doubt, more motivating than I ever anticipated.

About Us

Jennifer Westecott's personal journey through trauma and heartache has profoundly shaped her as a storyteller, enabling her to craft narratives that resonate deeply with her readers. By transforming her own experiences into beautiful, memorable tales, she creates a bridge of relatability that invites her audience to connect with her work on an emotional level. Jennifer discovered that literature can serve as a sanctuary, a place where the pure love and hope found within her stories provide solace and healing from life's challenges. Through her novels, she not only shares her journey but also offers readers an escape into worlds filled with compassion and resilience, encouraging them to reflect on their own narratives and fostering a collaborative community that celebrates shared experiences.
